KENYA NATIONAL PARKS AND RESERVES

AMBOSELI NATIONAL PARK

Beneath Mt. Kilimanjaro (19,342 ft.), Africa's highest mountain, is the most visited of Kenya's National Parks, Amboseli. About a four hour drive from Nairobi or Mombasa on the Coast, it is in the heart of Masailand where the tribesmen still graze their cattle alongside the wildlife. The land is characterized by scrub and fragile saline grasses. The melting snows of Mt. Kilimanjaro feed rivers and springs that supply water to the park swamps. This lifeline for the mammals attracts large numbers of Elephant, Cape Buffalo, Masai Giraffe and herds of Zebra, Antelope and Gazelle. Lion, Hyena, Leopard and Cheetah are also found here. The bird life is phenomenal with over 400 indigenous and migratory species.

SAMBURU, BUFFALO SPRINGS AND SHABA RESERVES

Approximately 210 miles due north of Nairobi, past the equator and at the onset of the vast desert scrub area lie these three reserves. Watered by the permanent River Uaso Nyiro (pronounced Washeneru) it is an oasis supporting much wildlife. The Oryx, Grevy's Zebra, Somali Blue Ostrich and the beautiful Reticulated Giraffe, are indigenous to this region. The diminutive Dik Dik, Lesser Kudu and Gerenuk Gazelle are more prominently seen here than in other parks.

MASAI MARA GAME RESERVE

An extension of the Serengeti in Tanzania, the Mara is considered Kenya's leading Game Reserve. Its 700 sq. miles of undulating hills and rolling grasslands support a wildlife spectacular all year round. The Mara is host to large prides of Lion, dominated by black-maned males, Cheetah, Leopard, Elephant and herds of Cape Buffalo by the hundreds. You can also see a regular cast of Hyena, Gazelle, Impala, Masai Giraffe, Zebra, Wildebeest along with large Crocodile and Hippo in the Mara River. It is also one of the few places you can still see Black Rhino. Late June to early October is the yearly migration from the Serengeti. There is an unbelievable massing of thousands of Wildebeest, Zebra and Gazelle along with other migrating antelope. You can get a birds-eye view of it all with an optional hot air balloon ride.
